IBM Corporate Service Corps

Benefits to our communities:

- Ghana: An IBM CSC team helped formulate a national supply chain for medicine.
- Vietnam: An IBM CSC team helped spur the country’s economic development by boosting its tourism industry.
- Chile: An IBM CSC team improved support for small businesses.

Improvements for IBM:

- Insight into new markets
- Inspiration for commercial solutions
- Opportunities for clients

Partnerships

IBM has helped develop the international corporate volunteerism programs of some of its clients, exposing them to new markets and skills. IBM has worked with companies such as FedEx, Citi, John Deere and JP Morgan Chase, enabling their top employees to join selected IBM Corporate Service Corps teams on deployments. IBM also works with USAID to promote skilled international corporate volunteerism programs.

Growth for IBMers:

- Leadership development
- Professional effectiveness
- Cultural awareness

Engaged employees

Nine of every ten IBM participants say their international corporate service experience provided them with excellent leadership opportunities, while helping them better understand IBM’s role in the developing world, increasing their cultural awareness, and making them more effective at their jobs. Most employees say that participation in the program boosted their desire to complete their career at IBM. Engaged and committed employees are inspired to provide exceptional client experiences.
